But guerrillas seeking to unify Ulster with the Irish Republic disregarded the conciliatory Brit-ish move and launched a new unslaught of violence, an outburst that left four persons dead.

Within hours of the detainees' release order, a sniper killed a British soldier on patrol in tha Catholics' Ballymurphy district of this capital city. On the other side of the city, three suspected terrorists blew themselves to pieces while loading explosives into a car.

These and other hombings and shootings mada today the worst day of violence since London announced two weeks ago that it would assume direct control of the province. Moscow, Bonn Initial Trade Pact

By Hedrick Smith

MOSCOW, April 7 (NYT) -West Germany and the Soviet Union today initialed a long-term trade agreement that both sides hope will give new impetus to Chancellor Willy Brandt's drive to win ratification of Bonn's non-aggression pacts with the Soviet Union and Poland.

Both Moscow and Bonn have staked their European policies on ratification of the treatles and final approval of a new Berlin agreement as major steps toward relaxation of tensions in Central Europe.

Laird Says U.S. Will Go On Bombing

By Fred Farris

WASHINGTON, April 7 (IHT). -Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird said today that U.S. planes would continue to bomb North Vietnam and the United States would refuse to negotiate with North Vietnam until its troops were pulled back across the De-militarized Zone.

In the first high-level administration comment about the enemy offensive, Mr. Laird said at a news conference:

"There is a continuing major violation of the DMZ taking place at this very minute.

"The enemy has shown no will-ingness to seriously negotiate in Paris. It has shown no movement back across the DMZ and nntil those conditions are met, of course, we will continue to use the necessary power in order to protect our forces as they withdraw from Southeast Asia."

Mr. Laird nevertheless made it clear that U.S. ground troops would not be sent to South Vietnam to help cope with the enemy

"We will go forward with the withdrawal" of U.S. troops under President Nixon's pullout schednle, Mr. Laird said, pledging that "we will meet" the plan to re-duce troop levels to 69,000 men by May 1. Some 95,000 U.S. soldiers, mostly in air and artillery support, remain in South Viet-

The article published today takes Mr. Soithenitsyn to task for his view of history and for allegedly trying "to prettify Ger-man militarism" in "August, 1914." The book was rejected by seven Soviet publishing houses, Mr. Solzhenitsyn said last week. It is being published in the West.

The salesmen showed sales slips signed by Miss Davis and identified the two guns which the state says Jonathan Jackson carried into a Marin County courtroom to kidnap hostages in an alleged effort to free three black convicts known as the Soledad Brothers.

Jackson's brother George was one of the Soledad Brothers. Owen W. Swisher, salesman at a store in Los Angeles, identified a Plainfield carbine bought by Miss Davis on April 7, 1969. The state says Jackson, 17, carried it into the Marin court on the day of the violence.

Loved the Gun "This was the gun that Jona-than Jackson loved so much he would not let it out of his possession," the prosecutor said in his opening statement.

The gun testimony came in a day that featured eight witnesses, some giving eyewitness accounts which fleshed out the state's version of the violence in which a judge and three blacks died. Sheriff's officers told of being stripped of their weapons, a San Quentin prison guard described two convicts refusing a chance to escape the courthouse with others, and a news photographer said be saw a San Quentin guard fire shots at a van containing kidnappers and hostages.

The gun receipt was dated a year and four menths before the Aug. 7, 1970, courthouse violence. The judge, two convicts and Jonathan Jackson were slain in a ran outside the courthouse. Mr. Swisher sald Miss Davis ased from him $155.43 worth of merchandise; including the gun, ammunition, a shoulder strap and gun-cleaning kit. He said she presented a passport and a Birmingham, Ala, driver'a license as identification.

Both carried the name Angela Yvonne Davis, he said, reading from the sales slip and registration certificate. Wisconsin Vote Study Shows By Jack Rosenthal

NEW YORK, April 7 (NYT). York Times cross-section survey

Sizable numbers of Wisconsin conducted after the state's primary on Tuesday. The level of dissatisfaction is such, the survey suggested, that many Republicans might aban-don President Nixon next Nowember to vote for George C.

Wallace, should he run again as a third-party candidate.
These findings are based only on the views of Republicans who crossed over to you in the Demo-cratic primary Tuesday. Such voters are unlikely to typity all Wisconsin Republeans and the findings thus can be regarded mily as suggestive.

Nevertheless, the crossover of Republicans constituted a large bloc. It is estimated at 300,000, or 20 percent of the total vote in both the Republican and Democratic primaries.

The survey was conducted by
The Times and Daniel Yankelovich, Inc., a leading market and social research firm. A total of 362 persons of both parties were interviewed as they left the polls in nine counties selected Limited Analysis Even though the analysis was limited to those who identified themselves firmly as Republicans a third said they were dissatisti-ed with the Nixon administration. Two-thirds expressed the belief that the administration's wage and price control program was a failure.

It appeared from the survey that Gov. Wallace won about a third of the Republican crossover votes while Sen, George Mc-Govern; the primary winner, at-tracted about a quarter.

Political analysts had expected a large Wallace crossover, believ-ing that many Republicans, free to vote Democratic, would welcome the opportunity to cast "spoiler" ballots. The survey, however, suggested that many of the Republican votes for Gov. Wallace were seriously intended. Before interviewees gave their party affiliation, they were asked their opinions about the various candidates. There were notable differences between the way Democrats and Republicans desurbed Mr. Wallace.

For example, only a third of the Republicans applied the label "racist" to him, but half the Democrats did so. Similarly. Republican voters differed from his Democratic constituency on the issues they cited as important elements in the campaign.

Stress on Pocketbook All voters stressed economic issues. But Republicans put greater emphasis on reducing crime, an important Wallace issue. And they put far less emphasis than did Democrats on By Eric Wentworth ending the Vietnam war-a major McGovern issue. Many of the Republican Wallace voters indicated their willingness to vote for him rather than Mr. Nixon in November.

If there is a two-way race, the great bulk of these Republicans would vote for Mr. Nixon rather than any of the leading Democratic candidates. But in a three-way race, analysis of the survey suggested that many would switch to Mr. Wallace.

Among Democrats, it appeared that Mr. Wallace would draw away approximately equal numbers of votes from the eventual Democratic candidate and from Mr. Nixon,

This tentative finding casts some doubt on the widespread belief that Mr. Wallace's thirdparty candidacy would benefit President Nixon in the North by taking votes only from the Democratic candidate.

Publishers in U.S. Can't Tell A Book Refund by Its Cover

NEW YORK, April 7 (NYT) .--The American book industry, troubled by recent incidents of plagiarism and piracy, has become the victim of a counterfeit racket.

It involves the forgery of covers of paperback books that are returned as remainders, defrauding publishers of hundreds of thousands of dollars, More than 100 titles, including many best sellers, are known to be involved.

To eliminate what they regard as an organized racket operating in the United States and Canada, eight major paperback companies are completing a far-ranging investigation with the help of the Pederal Bureau of Investigation and the police in several cities. Sources close to the investigation said that evidence had emerged linking the forgeries to printers of pornography and to organized crime. There were also indications, the sources said, of plans to expand the operation into counterfeit mass editions of paperbook textbooks.

tween 14 and 20 cents. The distributor gets up to $1.25 from publishers, since they credit distributors the full wholesale value of unsold books, which usually ranges between 46 and 50 percent of the retail price, Massmarket paperbecks are generally priced from 95 cents to $2.50. To save on costly freight and storage charges, the publishers require returns of only the covers of the unsold book, in the understanding that the distributors will destroy the body of the books.

According to industry sources, about 100 million paperbacks, out of some 400 million produced a year, are returned by distributors.

Vietnam 'Options'

South Vietnam finally brings to a head the inherent contradictions in the Indochina policy followed by the Nixon administration for the last three years.

The administration has on the one hand progressively reduced the direct American military manpower commitment to South Vietnam, responding to the growing consensus that U.S. objectives in the conflict were not worth the requisite expenditure in manpower, material and national prestige, if indeed those objectives were obtainable at

The President has, on the other haud. persistently refused to modify the fundamental goal that has dominated U.S. policy for two decades—retention of a friendly non-Communist government in Salgon. Since the Communists predictably have refused to accept on administration terms the settlement of a war they have not lost—that is, a settlement that would assure survival of the Thieu regime—peace based on a politlcal compromise has been impossible to

With the United States clinging to its political objectives while steadly reducing Its military commitment, it was inevitable that at some point the other side would find couditions favorable for another attempt to achieve its own goals by military action. That moment of truth may have now arrived.

The spreading Communist offensive in -a foe helieved to have been gravely weakened by earlier battles and by American air interdiction would prove no match for an expanded and strengthened South Vietnamese Army, backed by unspecified American air power. This is the rationale for the socalled Vietnamization program that now has been sharply challenged by the strength and early successes of the Communist offensive. The agonizing question for the President, for Congress and for the American people is to what extent should the United States intervene if the tide of battle should begin to swing decisively against Saigon?

Administration spokesmen have asserted that the President is keeping "all options" open. In fact, Mr. Nixon's options are severely limited. Having committed himself to disengagement from Vietnam, having repeatedly stressed South Vietnam's ability to fight lts own battles, the President has a moral and constitutional obligation to consuit with Congress before recommitting American forces-ground, sea or air-to expanded battles in an undeclared war that lost its last vestige of legislative sanction when Congress repealed the Tonkin Gulf Resolution.

In weighing the optious, the President and Congress must coolly consider the national interest-whether the goal of saving the present regime in Saigon is worth the heavy costs and risks of re-escalating the conflict. In our view it is not. It is at last time that Salgon fought its own battles. It is time that the President put his repeatedly stated faith in Vletnamization to the test.

Pacts With Portugal, Bahrein

Last winter, the United States made a formal agreement with Portugal to use Lajes Field in the Azores, and it took over a British Persian Gulf facility in Bahrein to use as a base of its own. Contending that these executive agreements circumvented the Senate, Sen. Clifford Case, R., N.J., urged the administration to submit them both as treaties. It refused. The Seuate then endorsed his piea, 50 to 6. Again the administration refused. So now he is asking the Senate to block funds or aid in any form from flowing to Portogal or Bahrein.

Sen. Case believes the fundamental question of the Senate's right to pass on pacts with foreign governments is involved, and we believe he is right. To argue that the United States has been using the Azores base for three decades—the last one without an agreement-begs the constitutional question posed by the formal renewal and ignores the key political question of Portugal's increasing involvement in wars in its African colonies. As for Bahrein, the flimsiness of the State Department's argument—that difference between using British base and taking over that haseillustrates nothing so much as why the department's estate has fallen as low as it

In the Portuguese case the political issue is particularly sharp. The package which included the base agreement also contained some $35 million worth of assorted kinds of economic aid, plus possible access to as much as $400 million in Export-Import Bank credits to finance civilian development exports to European Portugal, Many Americans, and not only blacks, wince at any American involvement with the anachronistic colonial regime in Lisbon, even for an ostensible purpose-NATO defense-which has no immediate connection with Africa. The administration, however, added injury to insult by lumping aid and credits into the baserenewal deal. The inevitable if not the intended result was to convey an impression of American endorsement of overall Portuguese policy—an impression, we might add, which Lisbon has avidly spread.

The Nixon administration's tendency to put more weight on U.S. economic interests and less on political questions, in its dealings with white minority governments in Africa, has been apparent for some time. Sen. Case's point assures the Congress an opportunity to make its own judgment on this matter.

Bonn-Moscow Treaties

It is probably premature to suggest that the Christian Democrats are having second thoughts about opposing ratification of the treaties, but they must surely be rather shaken by foreign reaction to the prospect that they may be successful. They have always stressed their loyalty to the Western alliance and the Common Market, yet now they look around and see the governments of East and West in a rare state of unanimity on the damage to the whole delicate fabric of East-West relations if the treaties are not ratified.

Among other consequences, the Four Power agreement on Berlin would not be pot into effect and the Russians might show their anger hy precipitating another Berlin crisis. Prospects for halanced force reductions in Europe would be badly set back. The SALT talks would suffer. President Nixon's visit to Moscow would take place under a new cloud of doubts and sospiclon.

Responsibility for all this would weigh heavily on the West German opposition, and It seems unlikely that they realized the full implications when they decided to oppose

WASHINGTON—The Communists in Vietnam are now trying to win the war in one decisive stroke, as they defeated the French in the battle of Dien Bien Phu in 1954. It is a bold but puzzling strategy.

For while the enemy has thrown ebout 35,000 men into the battle just south of the Demilitarized Zone, and has had some initial success under cover of cloudy weether, there is little chance that they can corner and eliminate the main units of the South Vietnamese hefore the United States gets the full thump of its air power into the action.

This is not a Dien Bien Phu situation. The South Vietnamess now have over a million men under arms, and they are not concentrated and vulnerable, as the French were in the bloody ending of the other Indochina

Organized Units

Also, the United States has over 500 attack planes in and around Southeast Asia, and these are being steedily reinforced and directed against the larger enemy units now invading South Vietnam, not in scattered guerrilla bands but in classic organized

Apparently, Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap, who masterminded the Communist victory at Dien Bien Pbu, hopes that dramatic victorles in the north around Quang Tri City, and in Binh Long Province, 75 miles north of Saigon, would stun and disorganize the cotire South Vietnamese defense organization, but this is not likely with American planes dominating

Moreover, the Communists have left themselves vulnerable at the rear. According to Pentagou estimates, 12 of North Vietnam's 14 regular divisions are now operating outside of North Vletnam in Laos, Cambodia and South Viet-

In this recent invasion operation, Hanol has openly invaded South Vietnam across the DMZ and increased the risk of a counterattack by air and sea in North Vietnam behind their advencing forces. Maybe Glap's swift organized blows, north and sooth at the same time, can split and paralyze the south, and provide a political capital for the National Liberation Front in Sooth Vietnam, but it is a risky adventure.

The intriguing question is why Giap chose to move now. The weather favors the offense, and won't later on, but the U.S. expeditionary force will be down to 69,000 by May 1, and will be below the 50,000 mark a month later, with election pressure on the President to bring most of the remnant home before No-

The speculation in official quarters here is that Hanol has already discounted the U.S. ground comhat forces in Vietnam, now reduced to about 6,000. especially since President Nixon has ordered them to stay out of the ground fighting unless they are attacked, and that Giap belleves he can defeat the South Vietnamese units, as he did in

Officials here are not assuming Giap's defeat, though they are reasonably confident the offensive can be contained, end they are even saying once again that if the enamy fails this time, Hanoi will finally agree to a negotiated settlement.

It has always been a mystery why the Nixeu administration thinks the enemy will negotiate a settlement with our forces winding down to 50,000, when Hancl and the National Liberation Front refused to negotiate and compromise when we had over 500,000 men in Vietnam, but even the highest officials bere are still talking about Giap's "last caso" and predicting a settlement if the invasion is stopped.

Giap always has the option, which he has taken many times before, of retreating across the Cambodian and Laotian frontiers if his invasion is stopped. He would obviously like to demonstrate that the Communists can defeat the South Vietnamese on the ground even against American air power, and thus disrupt Washingtou's Vietnamization program end compel a settlement on Hanol's terms.

The thought that non-lawyers might act directly, rather than through what I obviously regarded as his highly dublous trade, had apparently never occurred to him.

Korea and Vietnam did not come about because the president arrogated Congress's powers over foreign policy. The Congress fully supported those efforts when they were undertaken. Sadat Move Seen Bid to Lead Palestinians

By Marilyn Berger WASHINGTON, April 7 (WP). Egyptian President -Anwar Sadat's move to sever diplomatic ties with Jordan, accompanied by heightened militant rhetoric, was seen here as a bid for leadership of the Palestinian cause. The rupture was expected to have little or no effect on relations between Cairo and Amman, which have been in a sorry state for some time. But it could have serious consequences if Mr. Sadat breaks trade relations and prohibits Jordanian use of Egyptian air space.

Mr. Sadat timed his move to coincide with a meeting now taking place in Cairo, of the Palestine National Congress, re-garded by some Palestinians as a kind of government-in-exile. The Palestinian movement has been fragmented by strains between extremists and moderates. The militant guerrillas had planned to use the current meeting to organize the opposition to King Hussein's plan for a Palestinian state federated with Jordan.

Mr. Sadat denounced this plan as being aimed at liquidating the historic rights of the Palestinian people. Following an Egyptian cabinet meeting earlier in the day, the Egyptian Deputy Pre-mier and Minister of Information Abdel Kader Hatem said that a break in diplomatic relations with Jordan had become necessary be-cause it had become clear that Ring Hussein's recent plan is only Israeli Deputy Premier Yigal Allon's plan . . . aimed at implementing imperialist designs in the area."

In addressing the Palestine National Congress, Mr. Sadat spoke of fighting "from house to house if necessary" and of paying "the price in blood." In recent months. Compromise Ends Judiciary-Panel Deadlock

Senate to Continue Kleindienst Probe to April 20

By Robert Siner

WASHINGTON, April 7 (IHT). -The Senate Judiciary Committee today agreed to continue until April 20 its investigation into the fitness of Richard G. Kleindienst to be attorney gen-eral in connection with the billion-dollar settlement of an antitrust suit against International Telephone and Telegraph.

Meeting in executive session for the second consecutive day, the panel voted, 3 to 7, to set a dead-line for the probe but also to expand it to include allegations by Life magazine of improprieties by the Justice Department.

The committee empowered chairman James O. Eastland. D., Miss., to review written questions to be submitted to the witnesses who will be called to testify in the next two weeks.

The committee chairman made clear that he would throw out questions that did not bear on the Kleindienst nomination. "Til try to be fair." Sen. East-land told newsmen, "but it's all going to wind up in a confirmation of Kleindienst." Committee liberals said privately that, even though the committee will be meeting from morning to night five or possibly six days a week, the April 20 deadline will prevent much thorough examination. The vote came on a compromise motion by Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D., W.Va., after moves by Sens, Roman L. Hruska, R., Neb., and John V. Tunney, D., Calif.,

deadlocked the committee yester-

Voting for the Byrd compromise were Republican Sens. Hruske, Hiram Fong, of Hawaii, Hugh Scott, Pa., Strom Thur-mond, S.C., Charles McC. Mathias, Md., and Edward J. Gurney. Fla., along with two Demo-crats, Sen. Byrd and Sen. East-

Against the motion were Demo-cratic Sens. Tunney, Sam J. Ervin r., N.C., Phillip A. Hart, Mich., Birch Bayh, Ind. Quentin Bur-dick N.D., Edward M. Kennedy, Mass., and Republican Sen. Marlow Cook, Ky.

2 Key Witnesses

The vote came after chairman Eastland had ruled out of order a motion by Sen, Ervin to void the compromise if two key witnesses, White House aide Peter M. Flanigan and Rep. Bob Wilson. R., Calif., were unable or unwilling to appear.

The executive session was delayed for almost an hour because of the lack of a quorum. When it did get under way, only seven Democrats and two Republicans were present, but it had previous-ly been agreed that proxy votes would count.

After the vote, chairman Eastland ruled that the hearings would resume Monday, at which time it was expected that witneses would be called to testify on a Life magazine article charging that Mr. Kleindienst improperly cleared a U.S. attorney who allegedly quashed investigation of illegal campaign contributions. A motion by Sen, Hruska that investigation terminate immediately and a favorable report on the Kleindienst nomination be sent to the Senate floor could not command a majority, nor could a move by Sen. Tunney calling for the testimony of at least 17 more witnesses and the expansion of the hearings to include the Life magazine charges. Monthlong Hearings

The bearings have been continuing for over a month, since columnist Jack Anderson charged that the settlement of an antitrust suit against ITT was linked to a pledge by an ITT subsidiary of $400,000 to underwrite the 1972 Republican National Convention. Mr. Anderson also accused Mr. Kleindienst and other top administration officials of being involved in the deal.

Three days before the charges were made public, the committee had unanimously approved President Nixon's nominee for the top position at the Justice Department. But after the story broke, Mr. Kleindienst asked the judiciary panel to reopen the Pan American was the object of the court action that triggered the airlines change in policy. The case started in 1967, when Celio Diaz jr. of Miami, applied for work as a steward and was turned down.

Charging that he had been discriminated against because of his sex, Mr. Diaz brought suit against Pan Am under the civil rights act of 1964. The airline argued that a woman's touch was needed to make flying "as plea-surable as possible," but the courts ruled in favor of Mr. Diaz.

The Supreme Court this winter decided to let the lower court ruling stand, and touched off a flurry of airline efforts to hire male cabin attendants.

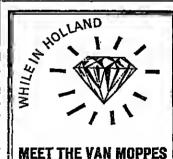

16 Males 'Graduate'

On March 30, Pan American "graduated" 16 male stewards in Miami, the first it had trained in almost 20 years. Yesterday, in Chicago, United Air Lines' stewardess academy graduated its first stewards for domestic flights, a class of 13. American is training three men at its Fort Worth stewardess academy. Trans World Airlines said it had not hired any men so far, but plans to. Other lines said they, too, would be hiring male cabin attendants.

There are now about 30,000 female stewardesses at work for U.S. airlines, plus about 300 stew-ards on over-water flights. Airline executives say it is impossible to predict how many men might eventually pin on steward's wings, but most expect women to far outnumber men for a long time. A recent Harris poll indicated that 54 percent of air travellers rate "friendly stewardesses" as a key factor in their selection of an airline. Nevertheless, airline SANTIAGO, Chile, April 7.- The Radicals have been in the officials profess not to ba disturbed by the intrusion of n ards and stewardesses will receive ldeotical pay.

Despite the court rulings, Mr. Diaz is still grounded. Although he convinced the courts that he had been unlawfully discriminated agoinst because of his sex, Pan Am argued that it was still not required to hire him because he did not meet other standard criteria it follows in selecting employees. Yevtushenko Sets Himself a 5-Year Plan

By Michael T. Kaufmann

NEW YORK, April 7 (NYT),-Yevgeny Yevtushenko, the peripatetic Soviet writer and declamer five years in Moscow writing plays, short stories and "a big confessional novel."

Although Air Force officials have defended the plane because it can fly large-scale combat units into battle on short notice, the report underscored its limited effectiveness due to maintenance problems.

THE ART MARKET

Russians in the Salesrooms

By Souren Melikian

LONDON, April 7 (IHT) -As art market categories run dry and as tastes change, auctioneers have been easting around for new kinds of work to include in "modern" sales. Four posh suctions taking place in London next week reveal how Christie's and Sotheby's are meeting the challenge.

The first sale, Tuesday, at Christie's will include a superb and early (1908) Picasso still life and a gorgeous Monet view of San Giorgia. In one of the two sales scheduled by Sotheby's on Thursday is a rare Jongkind landscape. Until a few years ago, sorts of works that one would have expected to find in important sales of "impressionist and modern" works. But now, the Picassos, Monets and Jongkinds are becoming scarce; and new names are cropping up.

The most interesting of the four auctions takes place Wednes-day at Sotheby's—it is devoted to 20th-century Russian masters, whose works have rarely been seen at auction. The field is wide

As for the other three sales, they will rely principally on the attractions of such newly-established commercial categories as donism, fauvism, surrealimm and high-quality abstraction (the former two in favor for at least five years, the latter, for about two). The naif (or primitive) artists are about to join the company. For example, André bring that much money. Yet such Bauchant, some of whose works a price would be justified. It is are in Christie's Tuesday sale and in a Sotheby's sale on Thursday. And, in one of Sotheby's two Thursday's sales will be works by Leopold Survage who worked in a fascinating combination of cubist and surrealist styles.

Russian Sale

In the Russian sale (Wednes-day, Sotheby's) will be works representative of the complex trends from 1900 to 1930. The rayonist and suprematist schools are represented. And there will works by artists known to museum-goers and dealers all over the world—Mikhail Larlonov, Natalia Gontcherova and Kasimir Malévich.

Most of the others are not so well known either in the West or in the Soviet Union where their work is now considered "decadent bourgeois." For example, Pyotr Konchalovsky (1876-1956) is little known outside of the Soviet Union. He was expelled with his friends Aristarkh Lentulov, Ilya Mashkov and Robert Falk from the Mos-.cow, Art Academy "for being too devoted to the works of Cézanne and Matisse," as the catalogue

Konchalovsky's portrait of a Spanish boy (39 by 30 1/4 inches), of fauve inspiration, is cted to make between £4,000 and £5,000. But any estimate is a shot in the dark as none of the artist's work is known to have been traded in the West. I doubt that the canvas will actually the Russian Knave of Diamonds group-and this is a major asset on the art market, whatever the school, the period, the country under consideration.

Konchalovsky's friend, Aristarkh Lentulov, did even more interesting work. Two of his oils, painted about 1914, have that Russian knack of reducing figurative compositions to abstrac-tion without losing sight of the subject matter. The same might also be said of Mikhail Matiushin's "Composition," painted on the eve of World War L It bridges the gap between Van Gogh (one is reminded of the landscape with a gnarled tree that Van Gogh did in imitation of Hokusai) and contemporary abstraction. But, again, there is no established price scale for such works.

Obscure Artists

The most interesting part of the sale lies in the purely abstract work of other obscure artists. A masterpiece by Liubov Popova is a gouache on board (13 1/4 by 10 1/4 inches), done in 1921. It is unlikely to rise above £2,300—a level under which one doesn't often find quality paint-

The two pieces that I consider the best in the sale should he much cheaper. The suprematist construction by Ivan Puni painted on wood, metal and cardboard, circa 1916, is among the first attempts to break down the barrier between painting and sculpture.

Recent exhibitions have focused attention on early 20th-century Russian art. Among the pioneers was Grosvenor Gallery with its 1962 exhibition, "Two Decades of Experiment in Russian Art, 1902-1925." Dresdner Bank From Wire Dispatches

FRANKFURT, April 7-Consolidated profits rose 70 percent last year at Dresdner Bank and parent company earnings rose 45.6 percent from the previous year. However, the bank's chief executive, Juergen Ponto, told a press conference today that this year's profits may not be as good as those of last year.

For 1971, consolidated profits rose to 141.8 million deutsche marks (about $44 million) from 83.3 million the previous year. Parent company earnings rose to 113.7 million DM from 81.5 million in 1970.

The parent company's balance sheet total expanded to 27.56 billion DM from 24.83 billion in 1970. On a consolidated basis, the total rose to 41.48 billion DM from 28.12 billion. The sharp increase was due primarily to the inciusion of five mortgage banks in which Dresdner has acquired a controlling interest.

Mr. Ponto said that he is woris now taking. He noted that netoperational earnings from regular hanking husiness, for which figures are not disclosed, ara declining. True operating profit last year showed a 6 percent

Japan Bank, MITI Differ On Strategy

TORYO, April 7 (AP-DJ) .-Kakuei Tanaka, Minister of In-ternational Trade and Industry (MITI), said today that the Bank of Japan should cut its discount rate by 0.5 to 4.25 percent.

The statement, which followed a cabinet meeting, came one day after Bank of Japan governor Tadashi Sasaki told a press conference that he does not have any plans to cut the central bank's official lending rate. It was last reduced in December.

The comments of the two officials highlighted a difference of opinion on Japan's economic management that has been building for some time between the hank and MITI Informed sources said MITI believes that the central hank has a fixation—the management of Japan's aggregate internal money market—at tha expense of more flexible pol-

MITT believes that, although the aggregate money market has adequate liquidity at the moment, certain sectors, such as small business, are hadly in need of lower lending rates. Japan's recession will be unduly prolonged unless certain hard-hit sectors are given additional assistance, MITI officials say.

Meanwhile, the Economic Planning Agency released its monthly report for March today, saying that, although Japan's recession has reached hottom, a rapid upswing cannot be expected in the near future. Final demand is still weak and the general economic trend will remain unchanged at least through the second quarter of 1972, the re-

Tender Offer By Bendix a gain, he noted, compared to the First in Japan20 percent gain of 1979.

TOKYO, April 7 (AP-DJ).— Success by Bendix Corp. of the United States in its open-market tender offer for about 5 percent of the equity of Jidosha Kiki, a Japanese auto parts maker, has resulted in a substantial number of inquiries from other U.S. firms interested in similar moves, sources at Yamaichi Securities Co. said

Yamaichi was the agent for the Bendix bid, which was the first post-war, open-market tender offer in Japan. Bendix acquired all of the 97,300 shares in Jidosha Kiki that it had sought at a price of 1,725 yen per share. The offer opened March 7 and closed

The acquisition raised Bendix's holdings in the Japanese firm to 26 percent from about 15.1 percent before the bid. A holding of more than 10 percent by a foreign entity in an existing Japanese company requires government permis-

Although the Yamaichi source declined to give any details concerning what sort of companies had lodged tender-offer inquiries or what sort of Japanese concerns are attracting interest, the auto parts sector is believed to be one of the most likely locations of future bids.

Last month; for instance, North American Rockwell said it intends to raise its ownership of NHK Spring Co., an auto part maker, to 20 from about 11 percent. Stock prices of many Japanese auto parts companies have been rising sharply in recent weeks in anti-cipation of possible bids.

Aim Was 'Distorted' By Confidential Memo

OTTAWA, April 7 (NYT) -A three-day meeting at which 50 high-ranking international businessmen were to be briefed by Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and cabinet members was abruptly canceled here yes-

Several executives of U.S.-based multinational corporations with bridges in Canada were among those expecting to attend, at a fee of $600 apiece, the sessions arranged by Business International Executive Services, whose head office is in New York.

A spokesman for Mr. Trudean said the meeting, scheduled for April 17 to 19, was called off because a confidential memo promoting the event "created a situation and atmosphere that was not conducive to good discus-

Distortion Charged

The memo that disturbed Mr. Trudeau was said to have described the coming gathering as "an unparalleled opportunity to suggest modification" of the government's forthcoming policy paper on foreign ownership of Canadian industries. This, said the spokesmen, "distorted the purpose of the meeting."

The long-expected policy state-ment is still secret, although a number of leaks to the press indicate that Mr. Trudeau is strongly considering some restrictions on foreign takeover of Canadian businesses. Canada has never imposed restrictions on foreign investment, and today about two-thirds of all manufacturing and mining enterprises, as well as many distribution services, are controlled by foreigners, most-2.5 ly Americans.

The head of Business International, Orville L. Freeman, who was agriculture secretary in the Kennedy administration, expressed surprise at the reasons given by Canadian government sources for cancelling the conference. Mr. Freeman said: "We agreed with the Canadian government to call off the round-table discussion because it was evident that its new policy on foreign investment would not be ready in time. This is what the meeting was to discuss and, without its being ready, we advised our clients that the meeting was untimely." He said there was nothing un-usual about the confidential meeting of business leaders and

Canadian officials. He said that Business International had been holding such meetings for the last 15 years, including recent sessions with the top leaders of the Soviet Union, France, India and the Common

Rate of Monetary Expansion In U.S. Spurts in Last Week

By H. Erich Heinemann

NEW YORK, April 7 (NYT) ---The rate of monetary expansion spurted upward this week as the Federal Reserve System poured funds into the money market, the Fed's weekly statement showed

The monetary base, which largely determines future trends in the money supply, averaged $92.4 hillion in the week ended Wednesday, up about $400 million from the provious week and all from the previous week and al-most $3 hillion from the comparable week a month earlier. Figured at a seasonally-adjusted annual rate, the monetary base has grown 127 percent in the last three months, as compared to a 3.6 percent annual rate of growth in the last balf of Similarly, total reserves of Fed member hanks, which rose sharply in the last week of March, climbed still higher to a daily average of $32.7 hillion in the week ended Wednesday. In the last quarter, total reserves—which form the hasis for expansion of bank credit have risen at a 12 percent annual rate, in contrast to a 7.9 percent rate of gain in the last half year.

The money supply-considered a key determinant of future trends in the economy—averaged $223.3 billion in the four weeks ended March 29, which represented a 8.4 percent annual rate of increase in the first quarter of 1972. In the first half of last year, the money supply rose at an 11.6 percent annual rate, but in the second half it was almost un-In its operations in the open market during the week, the Fed of funds into the money market may be having an effect in slowing the recent increase in the cost of money-though economists have abown that over a longer period rapid rates of monetary expansion tend to produce higher, rather than lower, interest rates.

The drop, to $1.67 a share from $1.69, reflected a narrowing in the profit margin, as gains in the bank's trust operations—as well as its miscellaneous "other" income-were more than offset by rising expenses and a sharp de-cline in bond-trading profits.

Total trading-account income was down almost 50 percent, to $8.2 million from $15.7 million

The sharp slide in interest rates husiness loans—appeared to have had little net impact on earn-ings, since both income from loans and interest paid to others were little changed from the first three months of 1971.

However, profits on transactions in securities were substantially lower this year—$1.1 mil-lion after related taxes against $2.9 million-so that the company's net income declined to $1.73 a share from $1.85.

Zeiss Ikon Drops Camera Business Zeiss Ikon is ending production of cameras and other photo equipment because of heavy losses.

Production will be phased out in the next 12 to 15 months at its Stuttgart plant, where expensive camera models are built. Last year it closed its Voigtlaender plant, where lower-priced cameras were produced. The company reported a loss of 19.9 million deutsche marks for the year ended Sept. 30, 1971, and expects a loss "at about the same size as last year." Withdrawal from camera production means Zeiss Ikon will concentrate manufacturing on safety locks, lighting equipment and projectors. The moya is expected to halve the company's sales of 132 million DM.

a 532-page fact-filled book covering 468 mutual funds

... used by investors, brokers, and money managers in all 50 states and in 67 foreign countries and now available to you in this special offer.

FUND PERFORMANCE DATA

Each fund's record over the past ten years (or life of the fund it shorter) is broken down year-by-year to show annual fluctuations in asset value, in dividend payments and in capital gain distributions. For each fund results are shown three ways: 1) assuming all distributions taken in cash; 2) assuming dividends taken in cash, capital gains reinvested; 3) assuming all distributions reinvested, compounded.

1C-YEAR RESULTS

The Guide reveals that an assumed $10,000 investment in the period 1/1/62-12/31/71 (with all distributions reinvested) grew to an average value of $18,640 for all mutual funds. However, individual funds showed vast differences: the top fund grew in value to $39,295the bottom fund declined in value to $7,963. FundScope ranks ALL FUNDS in order of performance.

FUNDS are rated for performance in both rising and declining markets, and for yield/income. Of 468 mutual funds, only 8 are rated above-average for Growth-Income-Stability combined. FundScope names the 8 funds.

FATHER Joseph Bredder makes Kerr. The emphasis is on police his eighth appearance in "The Mirror of Hell" by Leonard Holton (Dodd, Mesd, $4.95). As Dreviously the locale is California. This time Father Bredder has to deal with hippies, drugs, girls at a summer college, and the daughter of his friend, a lieutenant in the Los Angeles police department. The story and charac-terizations are skillfully set forth. Bredder has more than a touch of Chesterton's Father Brown about him, especially in his fondness for paradox: "There is a saying that things aren't always what they seem. And I think that oot of that can be got another saying: Things that seem different may be the same."

Paul Kruger's "The Bronze Claw" (Simon & Schuster, $4.95) is a cleanly written but conventional story about a lawyer acting as private eye. He has been en-gaged to locate a missing person and ends up with an old murder and an insurance fraud. Plenty of action here. Plenty of action also in "The Saint and The People Importers" by Lesile Char-teris (Doubleday, $4.95). As he has been doing for the past 40 years or so without growing older, the Saint takes off on a crusade. This one involves illegal immigration, and he nonchalantly wipes out the ungodly. Strictly for Saint fans and other 14-year-

Three words: French crime novel. Say them, and everybody will answer, reflexively, Simenon. But there are others. One is a lady named Laurence Oriol, whose latest book (translated by W. G. Corp) has the unwieldy title of "A Murder to Make You Grow Up Little Girl" (World, $5.95). Not even a comma be-tween "up" and "little." The writing belies the awkwardness of the title. As in so much French fiction, the emphasis is on relationships of people, Dialogue is terse, a good deal is left unsaid, and a great deal is conveyed by a single gesture or a tiny bit of descrip-

Oriol's book has a gimmick. Here is an 8-year-old girl, sharing a beach house with her parents and two other couples. One night, when she should have been in bed, the child sees a murder. She knows very well who the killer is—but the reader doesn't. Nor does the author solve the case until the end-and even then there is a surprise. Oriol pulls cards out of the air very nicely. Some readers may find that she takes a little too long to get things moving, but those who give the book a chance will find it rewarding and exciting.

Peter Alding, the pseudonymous British writer, has staked out an area for himself in a small English town. His latest book, "Despite the Evidence" (Saturday Review Press, $5.95), continues the sagn of Detective Inspector Fusil and the members of his department, especially Constable routine told in an authentic. sounding manner. A bit of this a bit of that, an inspired guess or two, and suddenly there is a case. In "Despite the Evidence" there is no real mystery as such The reader knows who the mastermind is. What makes the book so appealing is the strength and naturalness of the writing, and the really convincing character ization-including that of th criminal.

Frank Leonard's 'Box 100' (Harper & Row, $5.95) is a different kind of realism. It introduces a New York City welfare investigator who stumbles into big welfare-check caper. The part of the book is competently done, bot the crime elements d not give "Box 100" its special flavor. Rather it is the expose of big-city bureaucracy and the un feeling way it goes about mal treating the human beings supposed to be in its care.

Leonard, without getting on scapbox, pens a devastating pic-ture of the sleaziness, vensity and hatred to be found in our Brownsville and Bedford area And, since the author is so calm about it, the impact becomes terribly real. In a way, "Box 100" to New York what Higgins's "The Priends of Eddie Coyle" is to the Boston criminal subculture, But where "Coyle" is all futility, "Box 100" is all misery.

Here's a well-written little book: "To Kill a Witch" by Bill Knox (Doubleday, $4.95). Colin Thane and Phil Moss of the Glasgow police are back, trying to learn something about a mar-dered girl discovered in the river, It turns out she was a witch First thing Thane knows, he is having drug hallucinations, Laier, he finds dolls with pins stack through them, and attends a rite at a coven. Nice writing, nice plotting, pice book.

Nicklaus Retains 2d-Round Lead In Masters Golf

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 7 (UPI). Melnyk (72) and Lanny Wad-–Jack Nicklaus blew his lead kins (72). with a double-bogey today but came back with a birdle on the final hole to nip gray-haired Paul Harney by a single stroke the midway mark of the Masters golf tournament.

By trickling in a seven-foot putt at the 18th hole today, Nicklaus was able to post a 71 for the day and a 5-under-par 139 for the first two rounds. Harney, this year's San Diego Open winner, bogeyed the last hole and had to cettle for a 69, which gave him a total of 140. Until Nicklaus got his hirdle. it appeared that two holes were golog to cost him his lead.

The first was the par-five 13th where Harney got an eagle and the other was the par-five 15th, where Nicklaus went into the water and then followed with some more had shots that left him shrugging his shoulders. Bert Yancey, who always seems to do well in the Masters, matched Harney's 69 and was two strokes off the pace at 141. Jim Jamieson, who also bogeyed the final hole, was alone in fourth place, shooting a 70 today for a total of 142,

Only 6 Break Par

Only six of the 84 golfers in the Masters field were able to break par through two rounds over the Augusta National course. The other two, both at 1-under-par 143, were defending champion Charles Coody, who posted a 70, and 1967 runner-up Bobby Nichols, who had a 71. Nicklaus, who shot a par-63 in resterday's opening round for a one-stroke lead over surprising Sam Snead, appeared ready early today to make a rout of his bid for a fourth Masters title. He was three strokes ahead of the field through the 12th hole of the second round and was still two ahead after Harney's eagle since he had birdied that 13th hole himself. But whereas he reached the green on the 15th in two the previous day, Nicklaus placed his second shot into a lake today, He almost went into the water again after his drop, chipped up short and two-putted.

But golf's all-time leading money winner pulled himself together with some great iron shots. He could have regained the lead at No. 17, but he missed a sixfoot putt. When he got e similar chance at No. 18, he responded like a champion.

Spead Fades

Snead, who will be 60 years old next month and who won the last of his three masters titles 18 years ago, appeared to tire today after getting off to a fast start for the second day in a row. The West Virginian birdied two of the first three holes to move into an early tie with Nicklaus, but then faltered and wound up with a 3-over-par 75 for the round and an even-par 144 that left him tied with four others.

The others at 144 included Argentina's Robert De Vicenzo (69). who was robbed of a playoff chance here four years ago by a scoring error, and youthful U.S. pros Jerry Heard (71), Steve Bob Dandridge scored 29 points, Allen 24 and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar 23 for the Bucks, who open the Western Conference playoff final against the Lakers in Los Angeles Sunday.

Bucks, trailing, 69-60, midway in the third period, opened a 93-85 lead early in the fourth quarter.

The Bucks played with a hobhled Oscar Robertson, who was suffering from a recurrence of an abdominal strain. Also out of the lineup were two top reserve guards—Jon McGlocklin with a strained back and Wally Jones with a foot injury. That forced Bucks' coach Larry Costello to use Charles Lowery, who played only 134 minutes all year, as the

It's an important match to Foster, because Rondon is claim-ing his title as light-heavy champ due to something the loose-knit World Boxing Association did last year. The WBA stripped Foster of his title for not defending it often enough and gave it to Rondon.

MIAMI BEACH, April 7,-The weigh-in today stirred up controversy as Rondon tipped the scales at 177 pounds for tonight's fight, two pounds over the limit. Foster weighed in at the 175pound limit and left. Rondon who stepped on the scale 20 minutes later, was quoted at "177" by boxing commissioner Murray Grossman. MARY BLUME-

The Fine Art of Insulting the English

PARIS (IHT).—The truly magnificent English gift for self-preservation is never better seen than in the English attitude toward criticism. They adore it. The French may sputter, the Americans sulk, but the English clutch an insult to their bosoms and cherish it to the point where it loses its sting and becomes a tribute to their tolerance.

So fond are the English of insult that they are unbestable at insulting themselves: Can anything match the complacency, nay pride, with which Englishmen_observe-and they frequently do-that all Englishmen are mad? "We are." Harold MacMillan once noted, "masters of denigration, but all the time we do it with our tongue in our cheek. It is part of our traditlen."

Another part of the English tradition is to publish insulting books about the English. Dorothy K. Coveney and W.N. Medicott, compilers of "The Lion's Tail: An Anthology of Criticism and Abuse" published in London by Constable), point out that their book is far from being the first anthology of its kind. Their only claim to originality is that their insults are listed chronologically, beginning with Cicero in 54 BC "You must look out in Britain that you are not cheated by chari-oteers") and ending with contemporary observers such as the anonymous American who remarked in 1954 while passing through the speciacular English countryside: "It's wonderful, it's superb-what a good thing they can't cook it."

Between these two periods there are insults enough to warm an Englishman's

"Ferocious barbarians."

—Sidonius Appolinarius Eth centure "Those drunken and infamous English." -La Polye des Anglals

-Stendhal

"Unmitigated noodles." -Emperor Wilhelm II

Among the earliest criticism of the English is that they have tails (angli caudati, anglois coue were frequent early terms of abuses. Indeed, say the compilers of "The Lion's Tail," from the 13th century the tail began to be looked upon as a peculiarly Enclish appendage.

The myth of the tailed Englishmen persisted well into the 17th century, despite ample opportunities to see that English anatomy is not notably odd. It is supposed that the persistence of the myth is thanks to the English themselves, who are further thought to have invented the insult in the first place-proof again that no one can beat the English at insulting the English. though the compilers of "The Lion's Tail" are sporting about giving foreigners this 200 page bash at it.

Credit for being the first England-baiters goes to the French, who with the 100 Years' War became the first enemy who failed to conquer the English. The anthology traces ups and downs of anglophobia over the ages and disserts the nature of the foreigners' insults.

The leading occusation is, of course, Perfidious Alhion, made famous by Bossuet in 1052. Perfide and its close relation, hypothist run right through this panoranta of altitle:

"Nor here are there so many hypocrites as in England."

-Goethe

"I know why the sun never sets on the British Empire: God wouldn't trust an Englishman in the dark." -Duncan Spaeth, attrib.

The nation of shopkeepers gibe and its corollary, materinlism, get a good run, as do the Stiff Upper Lip ("acquired insensibility"—Taine, 1863). Insularity ("An Englishman who visits Mount Etna will carry his tea-kettle to the top"-R.W. Emerson, 1856, and the English Climate "On a fine day the climate of England is like looking up a chimney; on a foul day, like looking down one,"—Anon.).
Then there is the English Sunday ("An English Sunday blighted by unutterable boredom"-K. Capek. 1932) and hopeless English Habits t"When an Englishman says 'I'm ofraid,' he always means that he is damned sure -C. Hansen, 1935), to say nothing of English Cooking.

In fact the compilers of 'The Lion's Tail" say that nothing much was said about English food, which had an excelabout English cooking became an essential part of any book on England. Still there are a few queasy pre-1930s remarks:

"The English, who eat their meat red and bloody, show the savagery that goes with such food." -J.O. de la Mettrie

The state of the s

1748 "Their cookery has no savour." -H. Taine

Most unsettled of all were the foreign artists and writers and musicians who came to England:

"In this place I feel like R sacrificial lamb. I hope I shall never be in London again."

-R. Wagner

"In London you no longer see the populace. Instead you see a loss of identity, methodically displayed." -F. Dostoevski

"British women dance as though they were riding on donkeys."

-H. Heine 1797-1856

"I believe that Shakespeare cannot be recognized either as a great genius, or even as an average writer." L Tolstov English windows open only half-way, either the top half or the bottom half . . . The sun cannot enter openly, nor the air. The window keeps its selfish and perfidious character, I hate the English windows."

There are enough closely-printed insults in "The Lion's Tail" to make any Englishman's heart beat faster. Or perhaps not. The criticisms in the book are all by mere foreigners and aren't a patch on what the English say about themselves. Foreign critics haven't a chance: Indeed the strain that runs through 'The Lion's Tail" is sheer frustration because the critics know the English are impervious to their insults. Of course, they are, bless their hearts. As André Maurois remarked. "There is no nation which stands criticism, even severe criticism, so well as the English. They are too proud to be touchy."

Or, as Ogden Nash wrote at the end of a poem called "England Expects": Anyhow, I think the English people are sweet. And we might as well get used to them because when they slip and fall they always land on their own or somebody else's feet.
